1. How does INDIAN collect personal information?

INDIAN collects personal information in a number of different ways. INDIAN collects most information directly from customers where possible. INDIAN also collects personal information from its new and existing customers through warranty registration forms received directly or through one of its registered Dealers. INDIAN collects personal and business information about its Dealers. INDIAN also collects personal information from online forms on our website at <http://www.indianmotorcycle.com.au>

The services of INDIAN include:

- Import of INDIAN products and parts from Polaris;
- Sale of these products and parts to a dealer network throughout Australia & New Zealand;
- Provision of warranty for goods purchased from INDIAN;

For the purposes of the INDIAN Policy, these are referred to as “our services”.

This Policy focuses on how INDIAN handles the personal information about its dealers and customers.

INDIAN may also handle information about people who do not fall within these categories – these people are INDIAN’s “business contacts” (eg. our suppliers). How INDIAN handles the personal information of its business contacts is discussed at section 7 below.

doesn't collect sensitive information because INDIAN doesn't need it in order to provide you with its services.

INDIAN may provide you with promotional material from time to time. When INDIAN uses that personal information, INDIAN will offer people on the list an opportunity to be removed from its mailing list, or to "opt out" from receiving further promotional material. INDIAN 's use of personal information collected in the other ways outlined above is discussed at section 3 below.

If you do not provide INDIAN with personal information as we request from you, INDIAN may be unable to provide you with our full range of products and our services.
